Workplace violence in our healthcare facilities is a complex and sometimes deadly occupational hazard that nurses and other providers contend with on a daily basis — but why?

SEIU Local 121RN and the SEIU Nurse Alliance of California invite you to a day of learning and participation on April 30th from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. to discuss workplace violence prevention in our hospitals and how it ties in with the commemoration of Workers Memorial Day.

It is critical for us to learn and understand that, while every episode of workplace violence is different from the next, statistics prove that almost all of them are preventable.

This 6-CEU class aims to cover a range of topics specific to preventing workplace violence in our healthcare facilities.

One of our keynote speakers will be Dr. Toni Lewis, vice president of SEIU and chair of SEIU’s Healthcare Division. As a family practice physician and a geriatrician, Dr. Lewis is a powerful advocate for SEIU’s 1.2 million nurses, doctors and other healthcare workers. She leads the Union’s work on equal rights and fairness in the workplace and will teach participants about workplace bullying and lateral violence.

There are steps we can take to minimize violent incidents at our facilities. When we nurses put our heads together, we accomplish great things! TOGETHER we can reduce workplace violence!
